

Association for the Development of DOLA Murim (ADDM)

Empowerment of Gabonese women with smart irrigation, information and assistance

Description of the Context : Long regarded as a rent economy following the oil boom, the Gabonese economy began its diversification process almost 10 years ago following strong government impetus. Macroeconomic projections by the Gabonese government for 2025 suggest that previously neglected agriculture will become a pillar of economic growth.

However, in Gabon as everywhere in Africa, women are the main actors in the sector and have always played a major role in the production and processing of agricultural products.

In this context, the association for the Development of Dola Murim (ADDM) a non-profit association, created in July 2011 in Ndendé (chief town of the department of Dola) in the province of Ngounié in Gabon, | ADDM promotes economic development and fights against poverty in populations in rural and peri-urban areas.

ADDM offers free training to Gabonese women in associations and cooperatives for “training for project leaders and members of cooperatives and associations”, seeking funding from existing structures”, “technical supervision with assistance partners and experts ”, in addition to “ raising awareness of climate action and supporting women in setting up their income-generating activities projects ”. Keen to improve the conditions of women farmers and support climate action, ADDM is developing a project that combines low-cost solar irrigation technologies, educational resources and support for entrepreneurship in partnership with WINPARTNERS Gabon as a facilitator in the implementation of the project in the commune of Ntoum (Province of the Estuary) in Gabon. This project will be carried out on a 10 hectare plantation of market garden and food products.
